Indian Country Diaries is a two-part series of documentaries that, for the first time, explore the challenges facing Native Americans in the 21st Century, in both urban and reservation settings. In each program, a Native American writer reveals his or her personal struggle with many of these issues and invites you to come along as they seek answers.)

The Act was part of an effort to assimilate Indian people into white culture and was directly responsible for the loss of 90 million acres of American Indian land--nearly two-thirds of the total Indian land base. Please share this video with your friends and visit our website, www.iltf.org, for more information about the consequences of this historic legislation and what we are doing today to try to reverse its negative effects.
